Check your knowledge

1. Which of the following Markdown snippets would produce this text: *Hello, world!?

- ☐ *Hello, world!*
- ☐ Hello, world!
- ☒ Hello, world! ✓

Correct! Remember that you can also use underscores (_) instead of asterisks if you prefer.

2. How do you print certain characters, like asterisks (*) and underscores (_), literally on your output?

- ☐ Use three in a row, like  or ___.
- ☒ Escape them with a backslash, like * or _. ✓

You can also escape other reserved characters, including { and #, using backslashes.

- ☐ Unfortunately, this is not supported at this time.

3. Suppose there is an HTML snippet that you want to include on your GitHub Pages web site, but Markdown doesn't offer a way to render it. What should you do?

- ☒ Just add the HTML inline. ✓

Markdown is not a complete replacement for HTML, so it's understood that you may need to add HTML in to get the final results you're looking for.

- ☐ Cut the content. If it's not supported in Markdown, then it's probably

- ☐ not worth including.
- ☐ Open an issue that requests Markdown support for your very specialized scenario.
